

Expanding opportunities for people with disabilities

EveryOne Works was created specifically to help people with disabilities find work. If jobseekers need help understanding written or spoken language, they can use many types of adaptive equipment, such as computer stations with speech cards, a Braille embosser, closed circuit televisions that magnify copy, laser printers, scanners, wheelchair accessible tables and text telephones (TTY/TDD). Adaptive software is also available.

Participants can receive help with resumés and cover letters, career guidance, Internet searches, and interview techniques. Occupational skills training is available for those who qualify.

EveryOne Works is also an excellent resource for employers who want more information and guidance on people with disabilities in the workforce. There is no cost to employers seeking professional assistance with hiring, tax credits, sources of adaptive equipment, and specialized resources. The project combines the expertise of organizations such as The Bureau of Rehabilitation Services, The Board of Education Services for the Blind, and The Connecticut Department of Labor. EveryOne Works is a project of The WorkPlace Inc., operated by Career Resources.
